

Chris Healey

Chris is the Senior Vice President of Corporate Affairs at Grifols, a global producer of plasma therapies that treat rare, life-threatening illnesses and a world leader in transfusion medicine diagnostics. In this role, Chris is responsible for global corporate affairs including policy and advocacy, non-commercial stakeholder relations, community engagement and corporate philanthropy.

Chris joined Grifols in 2005 after serving as the Executive Director for PPTA, the plasma therapeutics industry trade association. He began working in the plasma therapeutics industry in 1997 and since that time has been helping shape global policy outcomes that impact the industry and patients. Chris started his career as an attorney at the Washington, D.C. law firm of Hogan & Hartson where he counseled clients on various aspects of U.S. pharmaceutical and medical device law. Chris is an active member of the District of Columbia Bar.

Outside of work, Chris has served on a number of not-for-profit boards including Path Forward, which works to end homelessness in Arlington County, Virginia and Aspire! which provides after-school educational programming for disadvantaged students performing below grade level. Chris is active in his community having held elected positions in his local civic association and worked to bring about safer streets for all users, including cyclists and pedestrians.